Principles of Frontline Response to Agroterrorism and Food Systems' Disasters (DHS) Response IA-Sioux City

The goal of this course is to demonstrate how an effective frontline emergency response can reduce or mitigate the effects of an agricultural emergency, an act of agroterrorism or other food systems disaster. In so doing, frontline agricultural and public safety response teams including personnel from the county, regional, state and federal agencies will be provided with a comprehensive program formed around the principles of the Incident Command System (ICS) and the concept of Unified Command. This course includes a plan that can be used as an "all hazards" approach against a wide variety of potential problems and occurrences within the agricultural community. Individuals who complete this course will be motivated to form and maintain appropriate community frontline response teams.

The purpose of this course is to train the members of frontline teams how to respond to a potential incident of agroterrorism.

Content will include:

- ◆ Fundamental elements needed to respond to an agroterrorism disaster in a community.
- ◆ Core competencies needed in a community agroterrorism/disaster response team.
- ◆ Gain insight to the communities' vulnerabilities and plan strategies for prevention, response and recovery.
- ◆ Strategies for building and sustaining a community agroterrorism/disaster response team.
- ◆ Collaborative strategies for the community team to succeed with state and federal responders.

Suggested Attendees:

- ◆ Emergency responders, supervisors and managers, law enforcement officers, fire/rescue, EMS and OES.
- ◆ Federal, state & local public health and environmental health agencies.
- ◆ Hospital clinicians and health care providers.
- ◆ Environmental health and public information officers.
- ◆ Agriculture industries, including cultivation, processing, distribution, storage, transportation and veterinarians.
- ◆ Elected or appointed public officials, and extension advisors.
